

New Release Version 5.1.12

Improvements to the 'Search Jobs' screen.

The latest New Release version 5.1.12 is available to all corporate edition customers and sees improvements to the 'Search Jobs' screen. Rather than having the data in one long list, search results are now presented in pages with the ability for users to specify the number of records per page. You can also click back and forward to look through pages, or to jump to a specific page.

Like before, results can be exported to excel, you can still select to have the data presented in ascending order or descending, and you can still adjust the format that the results are presented in, but now the revised layout will refresh and appear on screen simply by clicking on an up or down button selecting your preferred style, without the need to re click search.

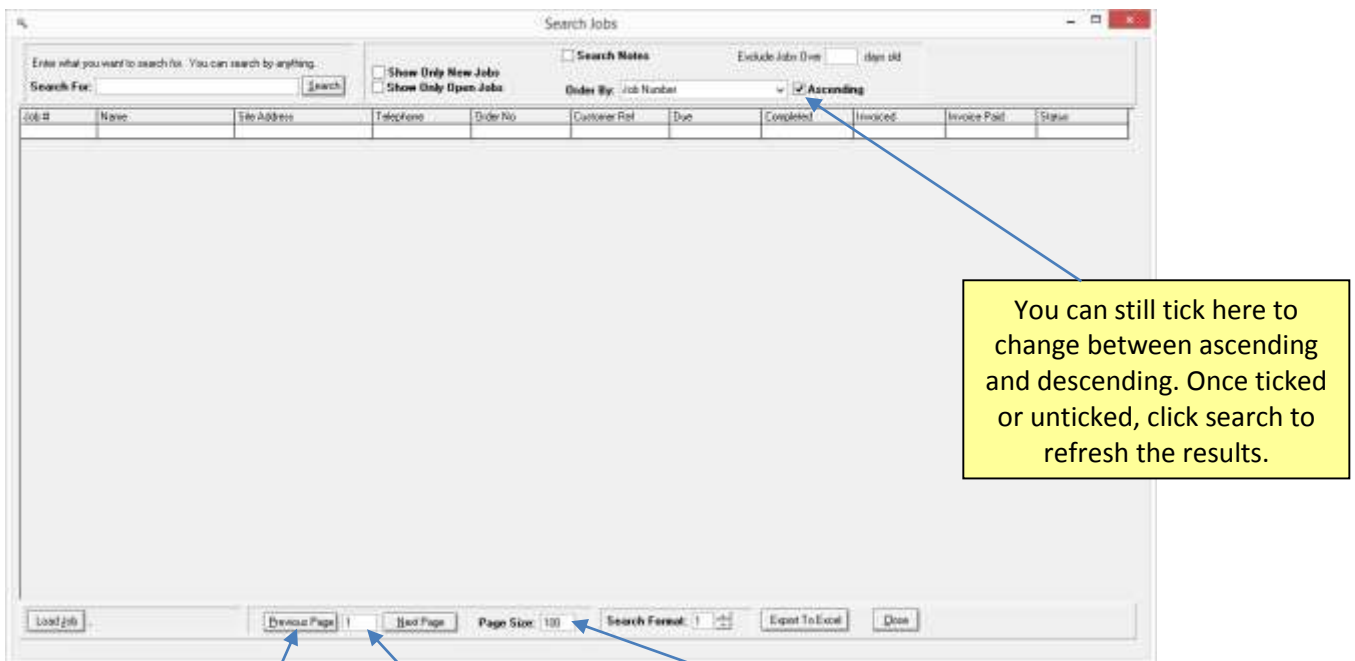

Figure 1

Once you have clicked search and the records are showing, click previous page or next page to scroll through the pages.

Alternatively, here just type the number of the specific page you wish to view. Key in the page number you need and hit enter. The results on screen will change to your chosen page.

Click here and select the number of records that you wish to show per page. This can be amended at any time, just click in the field to over key and hit enter.

Enter your search criteria in the 'Search For:' field on the top left of the page as usual. In the 'order by' field, select how you wish to order the results i.e. by address, job number or name. Either tick or untick the ascending field depending on how you want the result presented. At the bottom of the screen, in the 'Page Size' field, you can type in the number of records that you want to appear per page, this can be altered before or after you click search. To amend it afterwards simply type in the number of records that you want shown per page in the 'page size' field and click enter or click search.

To change the number of records shown per page simply amend the 'page size' field and hit enter or click search again.

Here you have arrow up and down keys to change the format of the page. You can either use the arrow keys to scroll through the available formats or click in the field and type the number of your preferred format, then click search.

You can amend the number of records shown per page to suit your preferences, screen size etc. You can also still change the format of the results, with 10 different options available. The difference is that now as well as being able to type the number of your preferred format, you can choose to utilise an up or down arrow key to scroll through the various format options available. Once you have your chosen format you still have the option to export that data to Excel at the touch of a button.

Once you have your preferred view on screen you can also amend the column size to suit your needs and preferences. Simply move your mouse arrow up to the column headings, hover over the line in-between the headings and you will see a double headed arrow appear, hold down you left mouse button and move the column width as you choose. (This same principle applies to your data when presented in excel)

Here you can see how many jobs are detailed within your search and also how many pages there are to view. The number of the current page is then shown here.

Using the up and down arrow keys here you can select various formats for the presentation of the data. There are 10 different formats to choose from, some just providing a revised layout and others either providing more or less data. You will see the layout of the data shown in Figure 3 here differs from the details shown in figure 2, both reports show the same jobs.

These changes are designed to make it quicker for you to view and access the records that you need in order to run an efficient business. Like before, once you have the details on screen you can easily access a specific record by either a double click on the appropriate record or highlight the record and click load job.
